KeyMacro is a validator that allows to match the contents of a file with a regular expression. The regular expression is kept in a properties file. That file must be placed at the end of the classpath when using the KeyMacroValidator. To activate validation, you must call the validate method. Once the validation is successful, the file is read and the values are returned in an Map. The class offers two static methods: getFileValues and parseFileValues. Downloads: KeyMacro Validator KeyMacro SDK KeyMacro Components Note: In the demos there is a sample configuration file with the expected keymacros. This file is placed in the samples folder. XMP Toolkit SDK Activation Code Download the latest and greatest KEYMACRO Implementation: KEYMACRO requires that you provide a Properties configuration file. The file may be either XML or JSON. The sample properties file is included in the project. The Properties configuration file allows you to define a regular expression that is used for validating each line of the file. The sample properties file contains the following properties: {"regex.properties": {"line.1.match": "commented"} } This configuration file tells the KeyMacro to validate a line of text if the match statement matches. Configuration in xml: regex.properties testFile.txt regex.properties It is recommended that you put the properties file in the same directory as the jar file. JSON implementation: {"inputFile": "regex.properties", "outputFile": "testFile.txt", "validate": { "regexFile": "regex.properties", "source": { "line": [{ "match": "commented" }] } } } A typical XML configuration file should look like the following: 77a5ca646e
